FORESTRY SURVEY

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 13.- The Annual Survey of Virginia Manufacturers shows that the forest products industry still holds the lead in several important categories. State Forester George W. Dean, after carefully analyzing the reports points out that 20.7% of the wage earners in Virginia derive their earnings from the forest industry. Also, says Dean, "the forest products industry pays 17.8% of the total salaries and wages paid to Virginia workers." As for active establishments, Dean further stated "over 41% of the active industrial plants are forest products manufacturing plants." The survey shows that 12.8% of the value of the products manufactured by Virginia industries are forest products. "The survey findings should be of interest to all residents of Virginia, since everyone has a direct or indirect stake in the economic status of the Commonwealth," said Dean. "Most of the raw material used by the forest products industry comes from the 15,000,000 acres of forest land in the state. Growing timber, although not listed as a part of the industry plays an important role in Virginia's economic prosperity," reminds Dean. "Not one county is without forest land or one or more forest products industries. To keep this important industry supplied with raw material, it is essential that timberland owners take a close look at their woodland holdings and ask themselves, Am I growing my timber as a crop, am I planning for the future crops, do I have any idle acres in need of reforestation?" said Dean.

The drought conditions of the past few years have caused many woodland owners to turn to their timbered acres for ready cash. Quite often this has resulted in the harvesting of premature timber. The State Forester warns, "it is imperative that Virginia's forested acres be protected from wild fire and wisely managed to protect the future of the important forest products industry."

Controlled Atmosphere Storage Lengthens Life of Apples

By regulating the proportion of carbon dioxide and oxygen in the air of storage rooms, apples may be kept in excellent condition six months to a year longer than the usual period.

This fact has been pointed up in research at VPI. The scientists say if the "controlled atmosphere" methods of storage were in general use, it would be possible to supply the market with apples in perfect edible condition at any season of the year. This would be of great value in stabilizing the market and increasing the use of apples, they believe.

There are over 50 cold-storage plants in Virginia with a capacity of over 5,000,000 bushels.

Another test underway at VPI concerns the use of harvest or stop-drop sprays for apples. These sprays will help the grower during the picking season by promoting early coloring, regarding maturity, or holding fruit on the trees to reduce losses and bruising which results when the apples fall to the ground.

The proper use of the sprays can be of tremendous value in allowing the crop to be harvested at the best stage of maturity, and will promote a more orderly picking schedule.

LARGEST FISH KILL FIGURES

At the request of the State Water Control Board, G. W. Buller chief of the Fish Division of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, has submitted to the Secretary of the Board an estimate of the monetary value of the fish killed on July 3-4, 1954, by wastes of an industrial plant at Piney River. Most of these fish were killed in the James River. According to a count of dead fish by species made by Albemarle County Game Wardens William R. Napier and J. G. Johnson, there were 25,000 black bass 100,000 suckers, 15,000 sunfish, 50,000 carp, 200,000 catfish, 1,000 crappie, 500 eels, and 100,000 mullet.

The estimated value of these fish is $50,514. No value was placed by Mr. Buller on carp and eels. It is believed that this is the largest fish kill ever to take place in any body of water in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Appomattox Weathers Hurricane Damage

Large trees uprooted in the Court House yard at Appomattox

Mrs. S. Guy Smith looks at damage left by "Hurricane Hazel"

Hurricane Hazel struck the Appomattox area last Friday afternoon with terrific wind and a downpour of rain. Cutting inland from the Carolina coast, the storm uprooted trees, ripped off the roofs of barns, and passed on northward to continue its property damage.

Biggist loss in the county was that at the Elon Baptist Church at Pamplin. A churchyard tree was thrown through the roof of the church, and allowed the rain waters to drench the interior. It will cost several thousand dollars to replace the church roof.

Of equal damage was the havoc in the courtyard at Appomattox Court House. Three large trees were uprooted, taking with them sections of sidewalk, and one of the trees fell across the Confederate Monument in the courtyard and demolished it. An effort is being made to reassemble the broken parts of the monument, to enable a possible recasting, but several key parts are missing. The monument was a landmark here, having been dedicated at ceremonies a half-century ago. To have a new monument sculptured would involve an exceedingly large sum and considerable time. The pedetal remained intact.

Another hurricane casualty was "Mammoth Oak," on the property of Mrs. S. Guy Smith on Route 2. Said to be the largest tree in the county, this aged white oak measured thirty-two feet around its base, and had a wing span of 100 feet. The tree broke off some ten feet above the ground, and littered the large yard at the Smith home with a maze of twisted limbs.

A tobacco barn burned, with total loss, on the J. L. Torrence farm. The barn contained tobacco from a two-acre allotment, belonging to Torrence and Jim Cardwell. The leaf was being cured, and the fire broke loose when the barn was toppled by the wind.

Part of the tobacco crop belonging to Charles Torrence and Russell Conner was lost when the wind twisted and damaged the barn on the Robert McQueen farm in which it was housed.

A roof was blown off a farm building at LeGrand Webb's. Also part of the roof was ripped off at the John Emmert home on Route 3.

Many telephone lines were down and service interrupted. Electric power was off several hours, and a number of farm homes depending on electric pumps, went without water.

Schools were closed Friday afternoon, to allow children to get home before the hurricane struck.

Despite the damage, there were beneficial results of the storm, for it broke an extended drought, with a tremendous rainfall.

Radar Increases Speeding Cases

An upsurge in cases involving speeders caught by radar, brought Trial Justice Chas. F. P. Crawley the busiest day last Wednesday he has had in his court since he has been judge. On that one day, his court heard 52 cases to set a new record for volume of business.

At the time radar was introduced to arrest speeders, there was a remarkable small number of cases, as drivers seemed to take the new device seriously, and slowed down. However, the number of radar convictions has suddenly gone up. Most of those arrested plead guilty to the charges. Radar is used at night as well as in daylight, and the only sure way to avoid arrest is to keep within the speed laws.

Bank Deposits Up $390,000 Over Last Year

In statements just published by the Farmers National Bank and the Bank of Appomattox, it is revealed that band deposits here are now substantially ahead of what they were a year ago.

Deposits in the two banks, as of Oct. 7, 1954 were combined to total $4,211,990.98.

This combined total was approximately $390,000 ahead of the combined total as of October, 1953.

The deposits also showed a healthy increase over the total three months ago at the last previous published statement of condition.

Va. Corn Price Support Fixed At $1.75 Bu.

The price support rate on Virginia's forthcoming corn crop will be $1.78 per bushel in the commercial area, comprising nine Eastern Virginia counties, and at $1.34 per bushel in the balance of the state.

In the commercial area, which includes the counties of Accomack Isle of Wight, Nansemond, Norfolk Northampton, Princes Anne, Southampton, Surry and Sussex, the rate is 90 per cent of the September 15 corn parity price, and in the remainder of the state 75 per cent of the full rate. The corn support rates just announced are the same as the minimum support rates announced last March since the parity price for corn on October 1, the beginning of the marketing season, is unchanged from the minimum.

To be eligible for corn price support in the commercial producing area, producers must be in compliance with corn acreage allotments. Ear or shelled corn to be eligible for support must be grade No. 3 or better except that corn grading No. 4 only because of test weight is also eligible for support. The corn must be in adequate storage. In addition, corn to be eligible for price support must meet certain moisture eligibility requirements.

The commercial corn producing area of the county includes all or part of 22 states, and embraces a total of 834 counties.

Asks Return Of Souvenirs

Often the practice of souvenir hunting is a good thing, but Appomattox County has sent out a plea for the return of some souvenirs. During last Friday's visit from the Hurricane "Hazel," several large trees in the court house yard here were uprooted and fell over on the historic Confederate Monument in the court house square. The monument was broken into many pieces as it toppled from its pedestal. A number of the pieces are missing. They may have been picked up by souvenir hunters. If so, the county begs that they be returned, so that the monument may be reconstructed sufficiently to have a mold made for casting a replacement. Shiroff David T. Robertson is custodian for county property.
